Linqore

From device to dashboard, engineered as one system.

How to use the Linqore name, logo, colours and type so the brand looks the same everywhere: website, social media, documents, devices and apps.

01 · NAME

Linqore

Pronunciation: LINK-core (/ˈlɪŋk.kɔːr/). Always say and introduce it this way. The highlighted q in the logo marks where "link" meets "core".

English / Spanish / French / German	Linqore, said "link-core"
Urdu / Arabic	لنک کور
Hindi	लिंककोर
Chinese	领科 (Lǐng kē), "leading technology" (suggested local name)
Japanese	リンコア
Russian	Линкор. Note: also the Russian word for "battleship", a strong, neutral meaning

Meaning

Link + core. Linqore is the central link that connects devices, data and software into one dependable system: firmware at the core, connectivity as the link, and the apps people use every day.

Writing the name

- Write Linqore: capital L, the rest lowercase, one word.
- Not LinQore, Link-Core, Linkcore, Linqor or Linqore's Tech.

Taglines

- Primary: From device to dashboard.
- Engineered as one system.

02 · LOGO

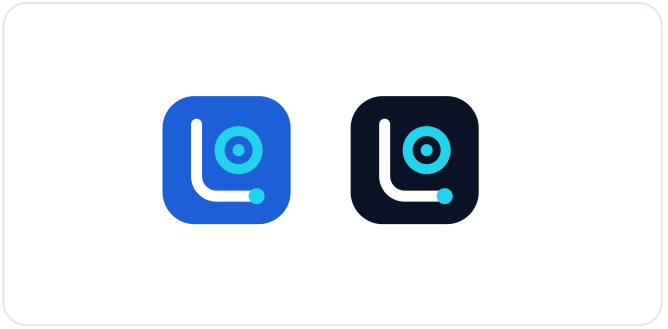

Logo and symbol

The symbol is the letter L drawn as a wire that wraps around a glowing core and ends in a connection node: Linqore links every part of a system to its core. Use the horizontal logo by default; the stacked logo or symbol where space is square.

Clear space and minimum size

Leave empty space around the logo at least the height of the letter "o" on every side. Minimum width: logo 120 px / 30 mm; symbol 16 px / 6 mm.

Do and don't

- Use the supplied files; never retype the wordmark.
- Use the white logo on dark backgrounds and photos.
- Don't stretch, rotate, recolour, outline or add shadows.
- Don't change the colour of the q or remove it.
- Don't redraw the symbol or move the core outside the L.
